

Everyone is welcome with their children to the open preschool

Open preschool is a meeting place for adults with children between the ages of 0-6 where trained pedagogues work. Before your child starts preschool, you as a custodial parent can visit the open preschool with your child.

Here children can play and meet other children. You as custodial parent can meet and come in contact with other adults, get advice and support and participate in activities. You can talk about parenting and the child's development with the pedagogues, as they are bound by professional secrecy.

We also have groups where we can bring in interpreters in other languages. You can learn all about how society functions and what there is in the area where you live.

This is how open preschool works

Open preschool is free of charge and there is no need to register. You can come and go whenever you want during the time that the open preschool is open, and you decide when and how often you want to participate.

Examples of what open preschool can offer:

- Song, music and rhymes which stimulate children's development and language.
- Facilities which will stimulate children's development, for example through role-playing games, creating in a studio and building with bricks.
- All open preschools are outdoors one day a week. We can then, for example, bake over a fire, paint, have a singing session and arrange a motion path for the children.
- There is coffee to purchase. At many open preschools, you can also your own lunch to warm up and eat.
